

COMMUNITY BASED RESEARCH AND ABORIGINAL WOMEN'S HEALTH AND HEALING

A workshop led by Kim Anderson

Wednesday, June 29, 2005 10 a.m. – 4 p.m.

Kim Anderson is chair of the Aboriginal Women's Health and Healing Research Group and has worked on health and social policy for Aboriginal organizations in Ontario. She is the author of A Recognition of Being: Reconstructing Native Womanhood and the co-editor of Strong Women Stories: Native Vision and Community Survival.

The purpose of this workshop is to foster connections among researchers, community members and students who are committed to deepening knowledge of Aboriginal women's health and healing through community-based research that reflects the priorities, knowledge and world views of First Nations and Metis women in British Columbia.

There is no fee for this workshop. Lunch will be provided. However, participants must register by June 24. Space is limited, so please register early.
